Workshop Overview

Treatment programs are changing constantly with new diagnostic and patient placement standards. The role of clinical supervisors is becoming essential to quality counseling. Many states require certified clinical supervisors who have passed the National Certification Clinical supervisor exam. This class qualifies for the 30 hours required by the IC & RC for most states including Maine and also prepares the participant for the national exam. The course builds on one's knowledge of counseling in order to understand the principles, practices, and procedures of supervision. Clinical supervision provides the most important resource available for training, management, decision-making and quality assurance. Supervision is also a critical element of the counseling process, ensuring client outcome and employee satisfaction. The Blended Model of Supervision has been developed by Dr. David Powell to address the changes in the substance abuse field. This course will address these changes: bridging the gap between mental health and addictions; new techniques of clinical supervision, such as solution-focused supervision and motivational interviewing in supervision; a new approach to counseling and supervision, termed by Powell "Contemplative Psychology/Supervision."

Learning Objectives

Participants will be able to:

1. Articulate their model of supervision and at least five other models;
2. Articulate the latest ethical principles impacting clinical supervision;
3. Define the basic skills and techniques of solution-focused supervision;
4. Define at least ten characteristics of three levels of counselor development and supervision approaches with each level;
5. Identify three problems in supervision and procedures to overcome these obstacles;
6. Demonstrate knowledge and skills in clinical supervision, using one-way mirror, co-facilitation, and videotaping, as well as the use of the sociogram in supervision; and
7. Articulate a new model of supervision, termed the contemplative model of supervision and psychology and integrate that model into the Powell Blended Model.

About The Presenter

Dr. David Powell is an internationally recognized trainer and is the most published author and recognized expert on clinical supervision in the alcohol and drug abuse field. He has taught courses on supervision for more than 35 years around the world. His three books on supervision are the primary texts in the field and are used extensively in the ICRC CCS examination. Currently, he is spending time in Turkey, managing an adolescent substance abuse treatment program as well as working in China, Singapore and Vietnam. Dr. Powell has offered this course in Portugal, Singapore, China and many states in the U.S. This is a rare opportunity to receive training from Dr. Powell in New England.

Target Audience

Licensed clinical personnel who wish to apply to become Certified Clinical Supervisors.
